He was feeling physcally better. His mind showed, however, upon general topics, or upon any at all, excepting that singular intensity with which he contemplated the distracted con dition of the country. While half reclining, half sitting up, supported by the arm of his daughter and niece on either side, Mr. Van Buren's eye lighted up with an unusual brilliancy, and even in his position he seemed to expand to the eye with Among the countless tributes that have the pride and port of the orator of other

The gentlemen around his bed say that it was in all respects worthy of, and in some first he rapidly and perspicuously photographed the progress, the purposes, and the problems of the late war, and emphazed the pledged faith of the Government that it could and should ultimate only in a secured Union of free and equal States. He then adverted to the efforts of Mr. Johnson to carry out that pledge in letter and spirit, and to have for his inspiration and guide the unmistakable commands of nanimity of the people. This part of this most remarkable address was followed by a scarification of Congress in terms of satire, eloquence, and reproach of which none were so capable as he. A rapid review of the policy of reunion and disunion next ensued, and he thought he was once more addressing his fellowcitizens in his native State. The subject was presented with a splendid reference greatness of the Empire State imperatively demanding that she plant herself square on the side of a perfect Union of Mr. Van Buren pronounced a eulogy upon the worth, the talent, the integrity of Hon. As a piece of composition, whether viewed as a literary, an argumentative, or an oratorical production, this dving address was in all respects no less a credit to the national reputation of the speaker, than it was a vindication and tribute to the cause and motives that evoked its utterance.

Public sentiment was divided, but naturally Mr. Jones shared the impressions of his fam-

Recently the latter opened a store near Oak Hill, and Mr. J. expressed a willingness to forget past feuds, and seeing a neighbor, Dr. McGuire, with a pair of boots purchased there, requested his friendly offices in securing a similar pair. They rode to the store together. The Doctor called out Mr. B. and stated Mr. Jones's wishes. Mr. B. is reported as Doctor called out Mr. B. and stated Mr. Jones's wishes. Mr. B. is reported as saying that he "had plenty more of the same sort," and going into the store to get them. He came out without them, however, and walking up to Mr. Jones, said, "I understand you charge me with carrying the Yankees to your house to get your corn." Mr. J. replied, "I have been told that you did." Mr. B. denounced it as a lie. "Do you mean that for me, sir?" Mr. J. asked. Some say Mr. B. replied that he did, others that the question was followed by a blow from a switch in Jones's hand, which was seized by Bayley and the spite of the grappling of his clerk, rushed out and shot Mr. Jones in the neck, the latter having in the meantime taken his stand on the platform in front, unarmed. MONDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1866.

In common with other conservatives, we have said that the pending amendment was proposed by the radicals in Congress not really as a condition of Southern representation, but as a radical platform for the present campaign, and that the South ern representatives would be excluded from Congress, even if the South were abject enough to ratify the amendment. In other words, we have said that the amendment is a cheat as well as a usur-

We have said this, and proved it; but we believe there is one article of the proof which we have not yet distinctly laid be-fore our readers. We refer to the defeat of the bill pledging Congress to admit the representatives of the Southern States on their ratification of the amendment. We will now supply this omission.

At one period of the late session, the radicals in Congress, not dreaming that low as to entify the amendment concocted by the join committee on reconstruction, evidently intended to pledge themselves to admit the South, if she would ratify the amendment. The pledge, as they believed, would be a cheap one, promising capital, and costing nothing They ran no risk of being called on to red Whatever power it should win at the batlot-box would be clear gain to them. when any State lately in insurrection shall have ratified the foregoing amend-ment to the Constitution, any part of the direct tax under the act of August 5, 1861, which may remain due and unpaid in such State, may be assumed and paid by such State; and the payment thereof, upon proper assurances from such State to be given to the Secretary of the Treas-ury of the United States, may be post-poned for a period not exceeding ten years from and after the passage of this act.

Such was the bill; which, as will be en, retained the whole matter after all within the control of the radical majority, the pledge having been, that, whenever the amendment should become a part of gracefully borne. STRANGE OCCURRENCE-PROBABLE SUI CIDE. -On Thursday night last a most singular and, as the sequel shows, fatal oc currence happened at the boarding-house f Mrs. Ann Johnson, opposite the St. Cloud Hotel on Jefferson street. Clark C. Brown, a boarder in the house, came down stairs between 12 and I o'clock, having gone to bed some time previously, and called for the landlady. Mrs. Johnson waited upon him, and seeing that he was under the influence of liquor, urgel him to return to his bed. some hesitation, Brown went up stairs, and every one supposed that he had again retired. But in a very few moments, Mrs. Johnson and others were aroused by something falling upon the pavement. On going out, they discovered Brown just getting up from the sidewalk, and, as they approached, he ran with all speed, down econd street, toward the river. He had walked from a window in the second story to the roof of the porch or shed below and from there fell to the ground. As Mr. Brown had been dissipating for several days, his strange disappearance and continued absence excited no suspicion, until Saturday, when he was searched for He was not found, however, until yester-establish clearly the probable cause of this mysterious death. It is generally suffering mental derangement, from excessive use of liquor, at the time of his drowning. He had the reputation of being an industrious, skillful mechanic, and a strictly upright man. For a number of years he had worked as a carpenter in city, and latterly was employed in the shop of Mr. Stevens, on Jefferson street. The deceased was unmarried, and had no relatives here, we believe. His mother lives in Connecticut, his native State. There were no marks upon the body indicating foul the alarm and made his escape. play, but several contusions appeared on the head and person, evidently produced by the fall on Thursday night. The watch and other valuables Mr. Brown was nown to have possessed were upon his hody when found.

We are requested to say that the deceased will be buried at the lower grave yard at 4 o'clock this afternoon, when his riends are invited to attend.

MER.—This lady begins her engagement "Fazio." The enthusiasm with which a in this same performance last spring canmuch natural fervor and intelligent finish as to gain at once not only the praise but the lasting esteem of our peoole. While we consider her characterizati of Bianca as one of her best efforts, and equal to any portrayal of the part we have ever seen, we also regard her as second to no one in the general sphere of a legitimate actress. In the roles of Evadne, Parthenia, Juliet, Ion, Mariana, Bianca, &c., Miss Hosmer exerts a delineative force, a majesty of presence, and a consistency of art with nature that few tragediennes of her time can approach. During her engagement we shall have the extreme pleasure of again witnessing these highly classic personations. They will be given with superior effect, for Miss Hosmer will have the advantage of the ablest support, in Mr. Doud, Mr. Fleming, Miss Augusta Dargon, and others of the company. is not at all invidious to say that the theater-going public will realize from the engagement of Miss Hosmer a fund of in tellectual pleasure not inferior to that which Mrs. D. P. Bowers lately permitted them to enjoy. We have no other expecn than that Miss Hosmer will be most received by large audiences ile sheremains at the Academy. Since her last visit to this city she has appeared before some of the most critical audiences in the country, and in every instance her ated position in dramatic and social life has been nobly maintained.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.-Prof. Louis Hast, the indomitable leader of this so ciety, has advanced the vocal and orchestral departments to the consolidating point, and the first union rehearsal of the singers and instrumentalists will take place to-night. It was expected to hold this meeting in one of the small halls of Masonic Temple, but it has been found impracticable, owing to the inadequacy of room. The society will refore meet at the school building of Messrs. Knapp and Hailman, on the make this announcement for the benefit of the members of the Philharmonic, and not as an invitation to the public to attend the rehearsal; for it has been suggested to us that, on account of the large membership of the society, the attendance of out-siders would interfere with the exercises no rush for the rehearsal.

The Philharmonic is flourishing as have wished. This is clearly due, in a great measure, to the indefatigable work of the director, Professor Hast. He has not only labored with the utmost devotion himself, but his spirit of zeal and energy he been infused into one and all of the ers, so that there is entire unity of est. The glorious results of this emwe action will be reaped by the usic-loving public in a short while.

MORE DEPREDATING.

Excitement in Lebanon, Ky. Doings of the "Skeggs Men"-Abuse of the Negroes.

About 10 o'clock on Friday night the ere startled by the rattling of horses' oofs and the discharge of fire-arms, in companied with frequent oaths. The first mpression of those who had retired was evidently wide-spread. Considerable that a band of guerillas or robbers had damage was done to property in and about made a predatory incursion into the town, the neat little hall in Woodland Garden. for the purposes of pillage and plunder. After furiously riding through the main streets, and discharging their pistols, a number of the men dismounted and broke some small establishments, owned and occupied by negroes, and literally gutted the houses, destroying the contents. upsetting tables and chairs, and throwing he debris into the streets.

After this feat a number of pistols were ischarged and the party at rapid speed left the town. During their nocturnal isit several negro quarters were roughly handled in a neighborhood adjacent to the town. This party is known as "Skegg's men," though "Skeggs" is a region. The men assumes the name and act as a species of "regulators," their enmity it appears being chiefly directed was hurt by the raiders, although during the firing a horse was shot on the street. The party was variously estimated at from twenty-five to forty. The men are not known nor are they considered in any ense responsible. The citizens of Lebanon should not be censured for these lawless acts, which they regard as highly repehensible, and calculated to stir up strife

The Danville Advocate of Friday tells of another audacious transaction at the first toll-gate on the Perryville turnpike, kept by Mrs. Bently. Two men, disguised, entered the front room, with pistols in hand, and demanded of two young men who were in the room their pocketbooks, watches, &c., and then compelled them to take their seats while they proceeded to further pilfering. Fortunately Mrs. Bentley paid over that day the receipts of the gate, with the exception of some eight or ten dollars in small currency, and the robbers were disappointed, no doubt, in the main object of their un-welcome visit. We did not understand getting from the young men, but presume the amounts were not large. They came from the direction of Danville, remained but a short time, and appeared to be uneasy while pilfering the house, owing, no doubt, to the early hour, and the probability of detection. itor were in the house at the time the obbery was going on, but the villains threatened to shoot any of them who should attempt to leave the house or to sound any alarm whatever. BARNUM'S LECTURE. - A multitude o people, anxious to be humbugged, went to hear the lecture of P. T. Barnum Saturday night. But it is the popular notion that nobody was humbugged. DISCOVERY OF CONCEALED MONEY.-A singular discovery was recently made by a girl employed in the Wisconsin paper mill at Milwaukee, illustrating forcibly the old adage, that "what is one person's loss is another person's gain." Last Friday while one of the girls was sorting a lot of the control rags which had recently been shipped to Milwaukee, she came across an old army knapsack, which, in taking to pieces, revealed a package of $1,600 in green-backs, which had been sewed between the lining and the outside. It has been customers at the mill when money is found. lining and the outside. It has been customary at the mill when money is found concealed to take it to the office of the works and surrender it to the proprietors, the finder receiving a liberal reward. But the fortunate owner of the above-mentioned nackage, instead of complying with knapsack laying on the field was con-demned as worthless, and the money in-tended to alleviate the sorrows of the fu-ture, in the above remarkable manner, fell into the hands of strangers. Chicago rags are decidedly profitable.—Exchange.

Dear L: The cholera has killed everybody here except McGuire and myself.

We have had some of the most majestic chills recorded in history, or in "Fox's Book of Martyrs." McGuire has one every third day. And such chills! They shake the boat so badly that it takes all our time between trips to repair! She still carries marks of vis last chill in broken timbers and splintered furniture. Business here is brisk. We carry up one bundle cotton-bale ties each trip, then carry down the owner gratis, board him while we lay in Vicksburg, carry him back on the seme terms, and then get "cussed" for not putting him off within six inches of his landing; and for not giving him a "long-necked bottle from the bar" without charge, he gives the boat a hard name among his neighbors. But it is all on account of opposition. I have heard it hinted that "opposition was the life of trade," but it comes very near being death to us.
